Alternative Policy Groups and the Struggle for Global Justice

WILLIAM K. CARROLL

Published 15th July 2016

- A detailed empirical analysis of how transnational alternative policy groups develop alternative ways of organising economic, political and social life
- Investigates how these groups link up with each other and how they are embedded in a broader field of social relations within global civil society
- “With this penetrating study of transnational alternative policy groups, Carroll and his colleagues demonstrate that while they are embedded within a network of hegemonic institutions they can also mediate between movements and media, between counterpublics and general publics, and go beyond resistance into the realm of counter-hegemonic politics and the struggle for global justice.”
- Leslie Sklair, London School of Economics

Neoliberal capitalism positions us all as consumers in a hypermarket where money talks. For the majority of people around the globe, this translates as precarity and immiseration. But how can we break from this dominant ideological framework?

Expose, Oppose, Propose details how, since the mid 1970s, transnational alternative policy groups (TAPGs) have functioned as think tanks of a different sort, generating resources for a ‘globalization from below’ in dialogue with the critical social movements that are protagonists for global justice.

Based on two years of intensive research, William Carroll not only provides a detailed examination of a variety of TAPGs – showing how each group is distinctive and autonomous in its vision, practical priorities, and ways of producing and mobilizing alternative knowledge – but also reveals how TAPGs form a ‘master frame’ that advocates and envisages global justice and ecological well-being.
